WASHINGTON, March 4.—Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts, took office as vice-president of the U. S. today, and Thomas Riley Marshall, of Indiana, relinquished that office—both voicing the hope that their nation may follow the precepts of its founders.

Calvin Coolidge, tall, austere and somewhat shy—New Englander—stood on the rostrum of the senate of the United States, faced that body over which he will preside for the next four years, took the oath of office and expressed the hope that "the vision of past generations may be more and more the reality of generations yet to come."

Thomas Riley Marshall, frail, grayed, and with a tinge of regret in his voice, as he relinquished office, had a few minutes before delivering his valedictory.

"I may have failed but I have tried to keep the faith," Mr. Marshall said in farewell.

Having bade his farewell, Mr. Marshall administered the oath of office to his successor, and stepped out to a private citizen. Calvin Coolidge took up the little ivory gavel—the same that has been used by vice-presidents for more than a century—and called the senate to order and addressed the body briefly.

"Five generations ago there was revealed to the people of this nation a new relationship between man and man, which they declared and proclaimed in the American constitution. Therein they recognized a legislature empowered to express the will of the people in law; a judiciary required to determine and state such law, and an executive charged with securing obedience to the law, all holding their office not by reason of some superior force but thru the duly determined conscience of their countrymen."

"To the House, close to the heart of the nation, renewing its membership by frequent elections, representing directly the people, reflecting their common purpose, has been granted a full measure of the power of legislation and exclusive authority to originate legislation."

"To the senate, renewing its membership by degrees, representing in part the sovereign states, has been granted not only a full measure of power of legislation, but, if possible, far more important functions. To it is intrusted the duty of review of the president's treaty making power. But its greatest function of all, too little mentioned and too little understood, whether exercised in legislation or reviewing, is the preservation of liberty. Not merely the rights of the majority, but the rights of the minority, from whatever source they may be asserted. The great object for us to seek here, for the constitution itself, is to continue to make this chamber, as it was intended by the fathers, the citadel of liberty. An enormous power is here conferred, capable of much good or ill, open, it may be to abuse, but necessary, wholly and absolutely necessary, to secure the required result."

"Whatever its faults, whatever its human imperfections, there is no executive body in all history that has used its powers with more wisdom and discretion, more uniformly for the execution of the public will, or more in harmony with the spirit of the authority of the people which created it than the United States senate."

"I take up the duties the people have assigned me, under the constitution which we can neither enlarge nor diminish, of presiding over this senate, agreeable to its rules and regulations, deeply conscious that it will continue to function in harmony with its high traditions as a great deliberative body, without passion and without fear, unmoved by clamor, but most sensitive to the right, the strong hold of government according to law, that the vision of past generations may be more and more the reality of"

MUSKINGUM COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO HELP FRAZEYSBURG

Muskingum county commissioners gave their approval of the proposed improvement of the Frazeysburg-Zanesville road at a meeting of good road boosters of Frazeysburg and Zanesville held at the Memorial Hall in Zanesville Thursday.

The commissioners were shown that the improvement of the road was an absolute necessity and gave their promise of support in the work. Promises were also given the Frazeysburg delegation by the Zanesville Chamber of Commerce and the Muskingum Motor Club officials that they would do their utmost in an effort to help the little village "out of the mud."

Frazeysburg has only one train daily into Zanesville, according to the statement of the Frazeysburg boosters, and the trip by auto takes three hours. The same trip could be made by auto in 30 minutes if the roads were improved, they said. They added that on account of the bad high-way connections between the two towns there were ten tickets purchased to Newark to every one for Zanesville.

Postmaster James R. Alexander, vice-president of the Zanesville Chamber of Commerce speaking in behalf of the improvement, said, "Frazeysburg is the only town in the county of business rank which has not, or is not on a good roads route. In building roads we should consider the great need to the greatest number and I want to put the Chamber of Commerce and the city on record as favoring improvement of the road to Frazeysburg."

CROWDS WATCH THE PRESIDENT DEPART FROM WHITE HOUSE

Secret Service Men Lift Wilson's Foot to Running Board of Auto

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Woodrow Wilson rode the white house today, making the greatest physical effort he has made in 18 months. The president today makes the first public appearance he has made since he was stricken ill many months ago. Altho he has appeared in a theatre box, this is the first time he has gone before a great throng.

Early this morning Mr. Wilson was up and alert for the day's proceedings. He has displayed the greatest interest in the inaugural and insisted upon participating in the ceremonies to the limit of his strength. He even proposed to attempt to appear on the capital steps and hear the inaugural address of his successor.

The president mapped out a program for himself which will keep him constantly busy from 11 o'clock this morning until late in the afternoon. After the inaugural ceremonies he will go to his new home and will hold a reception there, for Democratic members of congress and loyal Democratic supporters.

Altho Mr. Wilson is making a greater show of strength today than he has made for 18 months, it was not the old Woodrow Wilson, vigorous and alert, who appeared before the inaugural throngs.

President Wilson walked from the white house unaided but as he reached the steps leading to the motor car he stopped for a brief instant and turned about, looking into the house. Secret service men aided the president, lifting his foot to the running board of the car. Seated in the car the outgoing president turned and lifted his hat to the little group of white house attaches who were gathered there. President-elect Harding then stepped into the car and the procession left for the capitol.

WASHINGTON MOURNS DURING FESTIVITIES OF THE INAUGURAL

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Hanging like a pall over the merry making of the inaugural visitor today was the death of Champ Clark, the great Democratic leader who almost was president. In congress hall hotel under the shadow of his beloved capitol where he labored so diligently for more than a quarter of a century, and within a stone throw of where today's ceremonies took place the great Missourian's body lay in state, mourned by thousands.

The cheer and noise with which the crowd welcomed a new president drifted down through the building trees in the capitol grounds and penetrated faintly into the dim room where death had claimed a great man.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The bill signed by President Wilson was one providing for the erection of memorials at Arlington memorial cemetery in memory of the soldier dead of the world war.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The terrific strain imposed by the inaugural program proved too great today for Woodrow Wilson and he retired to his new home on "S" street without witnessing the inauguration of his successor Warren G. Harding of Ohio.

President Harding became the new president at 1:17. Almost an hour before, President Wilson had left the capitol returning alone by motor to his new residence.

Mr. Wilson's effort was a game one. Under a strain which was apparent to all who saw his drawn face and limping figure, he rode to the capitol with his successor, signed some last minute bills, allowed others to die by a pocket veto, and then, very tired and much moved, he was assisted to his car and rode alone down the long avenue while the attention of thousands outside the capitol was riveted upon the new president.

The efforts which the president made to fulfill his part of the program challenged the admiration of all who saw him. He looked very feeble as he got into the car at the white house. His face was terribly drawn, but he lifted a wavering hand to his silk hat as Harding got in and seated himself beside him.

As the car drove off the president cast a backward glance over his shoulder at the great white mansion that he was leaving for the last time. It was a look of peculiar intensity.

Up the avenue the president and president-elect held close conversation. The two men presented a never to be forgotten picture as they drove slowly along. Woodrow Wilson, shrunken, his face drawn and his left arm held at a peculiar angle—Harding the picture of radiant health and vitality. With their heads close together, they drove up the avenue in the bright sunshine and cheering lanes of people. Harding constantly tilted his hat slightly to the cheers without withdrawing his attention from the feeble man at his right. The physical effort apparently was too much for the president and he did not attempt to acknowledge the plaudits.

He was helped out at the door. Brooks, his giant negro valet put his two broad hands under his shoulders and with a secret service man at his side, the descent to the steps of the capitol was made. There were few people who saw Woodrow Wilson get out of the car, but those few will never forget it. Involuntary exclamations of pity and admiration broke from the spectators as the president started thru the revolving door.

The committee had thoughtfully provided a wheel chair just inside the door, but as difficult as was the journey—the effort being made was apparent. Mr. Wilson waved away the proffered help and leaning heavily on his cane started for the elevator. His left leg dragged a bit, and his left arm was held at an odd angle. Two secret service men were close to him. It was one of the most pathetic scenes ever witnessed in the capitol and there were tears in the eyes of many who viewed it.

The feeble man and the strong man parted at the capitol door—Harding striding resolutely ahead and up the steps to the "S" street room—Wilson, the picture of broken health, limping to the elevator and then lifted to the chamber floor and went thru with his last legislative tasks.

These finished, the strength which had impelled him to undertake the trip seemed to wane and at the earnest solicitation of those about him, he descended to the "S" street room.

HISTORIC BIBLE USED BY HARDING IN TAKING OATH OF OFFICE TODAY

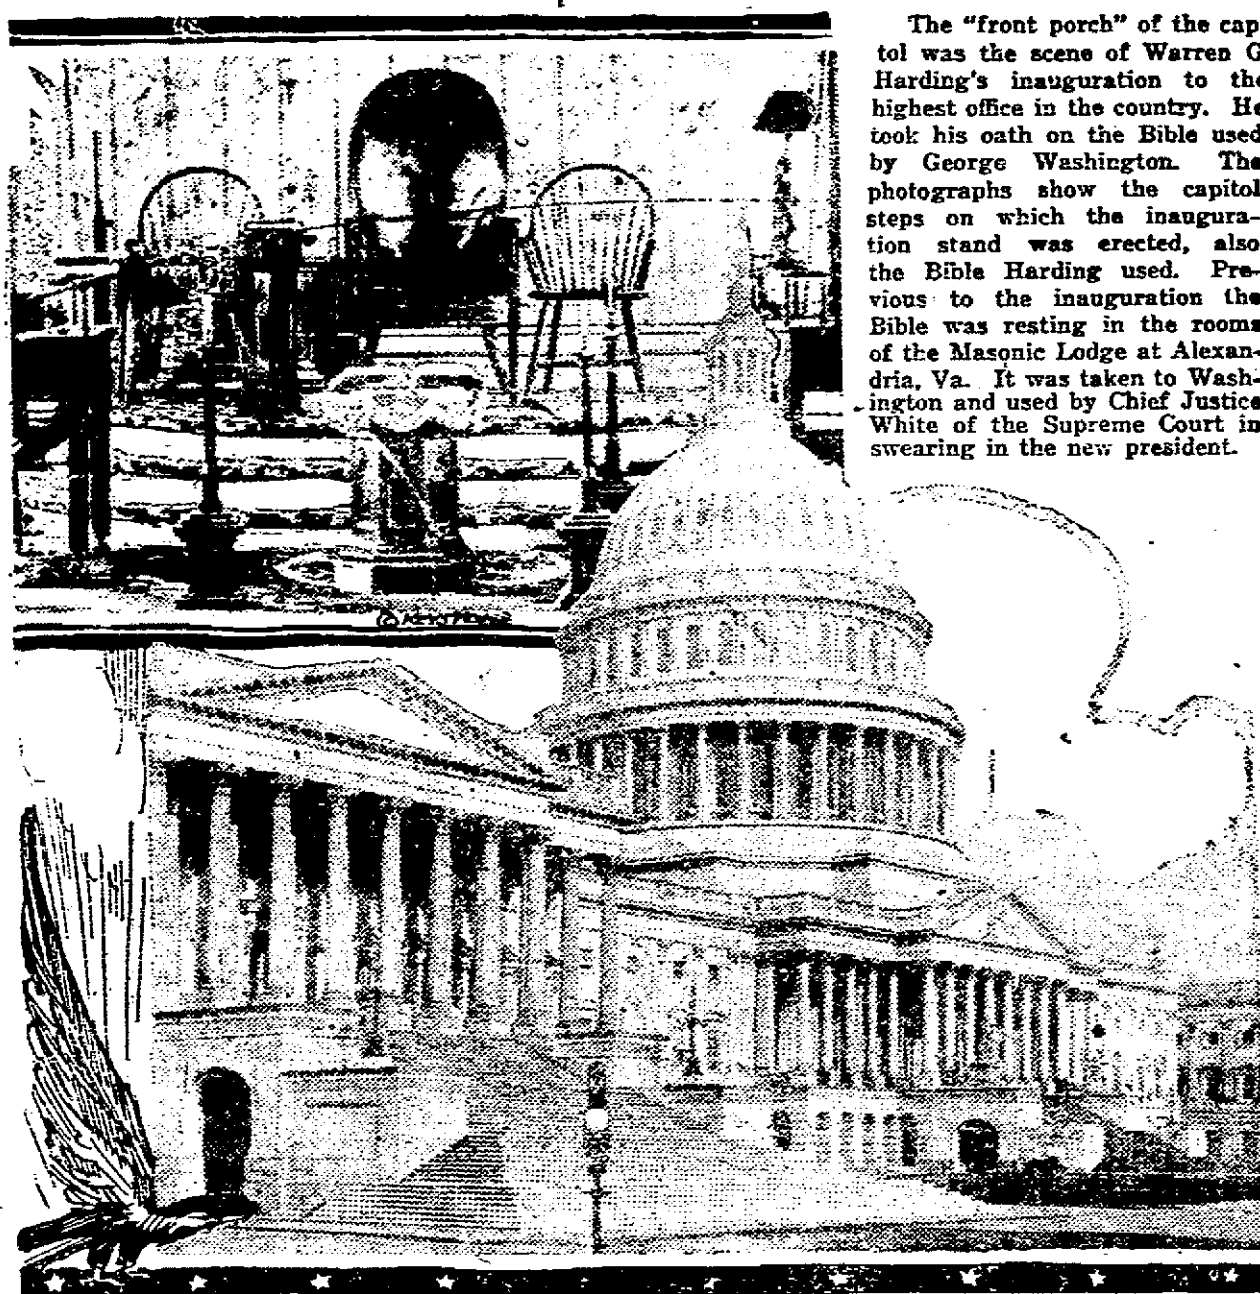

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 4.—When President Warren G. Harding took the oath of office as President of the United States today he laid his hand upon the same Bible which was used for the first inauguration of George Washington in 1789.

President Harding expressed the wish that this rare and yellow Bible, carefully preserved for over 122 years, be used in administering the oath of office instead of the Bible of the Supreme Court of the United States, which is customarily used at inaugurations.

The old Bible is the most sacred and treasured possession of St. John's Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, No. 1, of New York City. In recent years it has been kept perpetually under lock and key in a safety deposit vault to protect it from the ravages of time. It was taken from its resting place a few days ago and, guarded by a delegation of three stalwart Masons, selected by the lodge, was brought to this city. These guardians of the priceless treasure have never allowed the Bible from their sight during the inauguration trip, and they were stationed on the inauguration platform today, handing the book to Chief Justice White, who administered the oath to the President. After the oath was administered the Bible was immediately returned to their keeping.

The Bible became the instrument of George Washington's induction into office in a curious way. The first President was sworn into office at the then Federal Building in New York City, which stood on the site of the present Sub-Treasury. There was not a single copy of the Bible in the building and Chancellor Livingston, who was to administer the oath, was Master of St. John's Lodge of Masons. He sent a messenger to the lodge

HARDING'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

My countrymen:—When one surveys the whole world about him after the great storm, noting the marks of destruction and yet rejoicing in the ruggedness of things which withstood, if he is an American he breathes the clarified atmosphere with a strange mingling of regret and new hope. We have seen a world passion spend its fury, but we contemplate our republic unshaken, and hold our civilization secure. Liberty—liberty within the law—and civilization are inseparable, and tho both were threatened we find them now secure; and there comes to Americans the profound assurance that our representative government is the highest expression and surest guaranty of both.

Standing in this presence, mindful of the solemnity of this occasion, feeling the emotions which no one may know until he senses the great weight of responsibility for himself, I must utter my belief in the divine inspiration of the founding fathers. Surely there must have been God's intent in the making of this new world republic. Ours is an organic law which has but one ambiguity, and we saw that effaced in a baptism sacrifice of blood, with union maintained, the nation supreme and its concord inspiring. We have seen the world rivet its hopeful gaze on the great truths on which the founders wrought. We have seen civil, human and religious liberties verified, and glorified. In the beginning, the old world scoffed at our experiment; today our foundations of political and social belief stand unshaken, a precious inheritance to ourselves, an inspiring example of freedom and civilization to all mankind. Let us express renewed and strengthened devotion, in grateful reverence for the immortal beginning, and utter our confidence in the supreme fulfillment. The recorded progress of our republic, materially and spiritually, in itself proves the wisdom of the inherited policy of non-involvement in World affairs. Confident of our ability to work out our own destiny, and jealously guarding our right to do so, we seek no part in directing the destinies of the Old World. We do not mean to be entangled. We will accept no responsibility except as our own conscience and judgment, in each instance, may determine.

Our eyes never will be blind to a developing menace, our ears never deaf to the call of civilization. We recognize the new order in the world, with the closer contacts which progress has wrought. We sense the call of the human heart for fellowship, fraternity and co-operation. We crave friendship and harbor no hate. But America, our America, the America built on the foundation laid by the inspired fathers, can be a party to no permanent military alliance. It can enter into no political, nor assume any economic obligations which will subject our decisions to any other than our own authority.

I am sure our own people will not misunderstand, nor will the world misconstrue. We have no thots to impede the paths to close relationship. We wish to promote understanding. We want to do our part in making offensive warfare so hateful that governments, and the peoples who resort to it must prove the righteousness of their cause or stand as outlaws before the bar of civilization.

We are ready to associate ourselves with the nations of the world, great and small, for conferences, for counsel; to seek the expressed views of world opinion; to recommend a way to approximate disarmament and relieve the crushing burdens of military and naval establishments.

We elect to participate in plans for mediation, conciliation and arbitration and would gladly join in that expressed conscience of progress, which seeks to clarify and write the laws of international relationship and establish

PRESIDENT HARDING TAKES THE OATH OF OFFICE AT SHORTEST INAUGURATION IN U. S. HISTORY AND IS ALREADY AT HIS WORK THIS AFTERNOON

Simple But Impressive Program Is Carried Out, and Thousands Cheer President on His Way to the Capitol and at Inauguration Ceremony—President Wilson Accompanies Harding to Capitol in Automobile—Quickly Takes Up His Duties

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—Warren G. Harding was inaugurated as president of the United States today in record time.

The inaugural ceremonies were the shortest in history, and but few inaugurals have been more simple.

Unwilling to believe advance notices of the simplicity of the proceedings, huge throngs began to crowd the streets early this morning, only to be disappointed.

The carnival spirit of other years was entirely lacking—even the streets were undecorated except for the flags which merchants displayed from their business places along Pennsylvania and the decorations that some of the old-time residents flung from their windows.

Shortly after 11 o'clock a half-dozen motors drew up in front of the United States Capitol, where they were to wait for the president-elect.

Headed by Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, the Congressional committee went to the hotel room where Mr. Harding had spent the morning at work. The committee with due formality announced that they had arrived to conduct the President-elect to the Capitol to be inaugurated, and the former Senator, with absolute lack of familiarity, addressed them familiarly, folded a small manuscript into his pocket and joined the committee.

A great crowd assembled before the hotel cheered wildly as the new executive made his way to a powerful motor and was whisked away to his future home—the White House.

As the cars drew up before the White House gates, the police on duty there saluted their new "boss," and he waved his hand at them.

GREETED PRESIDENT WILSON
At the White House doors the Congressional committee was met by the chief usher and shown into the East Room, where President Wilson was seated. After an exchange of greetings the outgoing President rose, and while attendants wrapped him carefully in a cape, he grasped his cane and rather weakly and with some faltering made his way to the car where his successor awaited him.

President Wilson and President-elect Harding, unattended by pomp or the blaring of bands, or a great military escort, then drove together down Pennsylvania avenue, thru a lane which police and secret service had swept clear. A troop of cavalry from Fort Meyer had been provided for an escort, but this President-elect asked for speed and the cavalry escort was of little real value as an escort. Both the retiring and the incoming Presidents acknowledged the wild applause of the throngs.

ARRIVE AT CAPITOL
Arriving at the Capitol the party made their way to the Senate floor. President Wilson went to the President's room, just off the Senate chamber, where he seated himself at a desk and began the signature of bills passed in the closing minutes of Congress, fading out of the picture.

A few minutes before the hands of the Senate clock turned to twelve the President-elect and the Vice-President-elect went into the Senate chamber. There Mr. Harding was greeted by his old friends and some of his old political enemies, and he was apparently at complete ease, or he felt at home there—it was the scene of his first big public service.

VICE-PRESIDENT TAKES OATH
Vice-President Marshall called for order, twirling his gray mustache. He made a characteristically brief speech, thanking the Senators for the courtesies they had shown him and then called Calvin Coolidge to be sworn in as Vice-President. Newly elected members of the Senate were sworn in and the Senate was adjourned sine die.

With the Congressional committee in the lead, President-elect Harding was escorted thru the winding marble halls of the Capitol to the front entrance.

As the new President made his appearance on the steps of the Capitol building the crowds gathered in Capitol Park went wild with cheering.

MOUNTS INAUGURAL PLATFORM
Preceded by Chief Justice White, the President-elect mounted to a small platform which had been erected at the foot of the Capitol steps.

With his flowing black robes swishing in the breeze the elderly Chief Justice stood erect and, facing the bronzed, stalwart new President, administered the oath of office.

The hand of Warren G. Harding, the hand that has set type and been grimed with soil, was respectfully placed on the Bible, the oath of office given, and the United States had a new chief executive.

DELIVERS INAUGURAL ADDRESS
Holding for a few minutes—perhaps for a silent prayer—President Harding stepped to the front of the platform, placing his manuscript on a little table which has been used by every President since Abraham Lincoln, and delivered his inaugural address.

The inaugural address completed, President Harding, still the object of the throng's admiration, took his seat in his automobile, leaned over and instructed the chauffeur to "go as fast as the traffic laws will allow" and was whisked back to the White House.

At the White House a little group awaited—a group of those dearest to the President. There was the tall, gray-haired woman that the President affectionately addressed as "the Duchess"—the first lady of the land—and there was an upright standing, bearded old gentleman, the President's father, and his brother and a few other members of his immediate family. They joined in a simple luncheon together.

STARTS WORK IMMEDIATELY
At the White House executive offices there was the bustle and stir of business. The machinery of the Government was set for business, for from the White House came the word: "President Harding will work this afternoon."

It was but a matter of an hour. The crowds were great. The spectacular features of other inaugurations were missing. The whole proceeding was dignified, impressive, but characteristic of the man—a matter of business.

Jackson's Inauguration Most Turbulent of Any of the Twenty-Eight

Dignity and precedent went by the board when Andrew Jackson, known as "Old Hickory" and the "People's Candidate," was inaugurated as president March 4, 1829. Never had such crowds assembled. Never had food and liquor been dispensed with so lavishly and indiscriminately a hand. Jackson was almost crushed into unconsciousness by the press of the drunk crowds.

It was the wildest and most turbulent inauguration in the history of the country, and it has never been duplicated, though in point of numbers attending it does not approach subsequent inaugurations. It was a violent contrast to the inaugurations of the presidents who preceded him, all of which had been distinguished by a quiet colonial dignity. It is certain to provide a striking contrast to the forthcoming inauguration ceremony of Warren G. Harding, the first candidate to be inaugurated since the advent of prohibition.

ADAMS DID NOT ATTEND
One of the features of the ceremony was the absence of President John Quincy Adams, Jackson's predecessor. Adams and Jackson had been friends until there appeared in a section of the Adams press a scurrilous attack on Jackson's wife, who had died a short time before. Jackson laid the blame for this at Adams' door and refused to make the White House call prescribed by custom. Adams, who was innocent of guilt in this matter, resented this rebuff and he and his friends stayed away from the capital during the induction ceremonies. The uniformed troops added further to Jackson's difficulties by declining to escort him, wherefore "Old Hickory" had to depend on a crowd of Revolutionary soldiers and officers for escort.

JACKSON RODE ALONE
Jackson, escorted by his motley troops, rode alone in his carriage toward the capital. After a short sojourn in the senate chamber, where he made an impromptu appeal to the name of the "Founders of Washington," he went out to the east portico. This was the first time in history that the inauguration ceremony took place on the east portico. In even tones after Chief Justice Marshall had administered the oath of office Jackson bent and kissed the sacred book.

Jackson's appearance had been the occasion for vociferous cheering and shouts of "Hurrah for Jackson!" A ship's cable stretched across the building kept the crowd back and prevented them from rushing over and capturing the speaker. As it happened, hundreds were able to break thru and write his hand. There was no formal procession, Jackson having expressed a desire to avoid all parade on account of the recent death of his wife. He rode unescorted on a horse to the White House.

ONLY THREE REMAINED IN ORIGINAL POSTS IN WILSON CABINET, WHICH RETIRES TODAY

Twenty-one Men Held Cabinet Positions During Stormy Administration Which Began So Blithely Eight Years Ago Today — Daniels, Burleson and Wilson Remained to Finish in the Same Positions — Bryan Was First to Resign

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Cabinet officers are coming and going in Washington today. The ten men who will help Warren G. Harding in directing the government thru the difficult months ahead are coming. The ten who are going are those who have clung grimly to Woodrow Wilson's leadership "for better or for worse" during the tempestuous years of his administration.

A photograph of the outgoing cabinet today would reveal only four of the faces appearing in the original Wilson cabinet that came so blithely eight years ago today. Of these four only three are to be found in the places originally assigned them—Daniels and Burleson and Wilson. "The Three Musketeers," as Washington knows them, have all been at various times the objectives of wave after wave of caustic and bitter criticism. Sometimes it appeared that these waves were so high that they must certainly be engulfed, but each time they have emerged unshaken and still clinging grimly to their jobs and to the leadership and doctrines of the man in the White House with whom they cast their political fortunes eight years ago.

Twenty-one men have sat around the long table in the cabinet room during Woodrow Wilson's two terms as President. How many will sit around the same table before Warren G. Harding joins those who have retreated from the White House offers interesting food for speculation.

WILSON'S FIRST CABINET
In that first Wilson Cabinet were William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, Secretary of State; William G. McAdoo, of New York, Secretary of the Treasury; Lindley M. Garrison, of New Jersey, Secretary of War; Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina, Secretary of the Navy; James Clark McReynolds, of Tennessee, Attorney General; Franklin K. Lane, of California, Secretary of the Interior; William C. Redfield, of New York, Secretary of Commerce; David F. Houston, of Missouri, Secretary of Agriculture; William B. Wilson, of Pennsylvania, Secretary of Labor; and Albert Sidney Burleson, of Texas, Postmaster General.

Bryan was the first to go. He found his mind unable to "go along" with that of the President in the highly exciting and nervous days of note-writing that preceded America's entrance into the war. He resented White House dictation in the affairs of state, for which he was responsible as Secretary. So with a "God bless you!" that has become historic, he resigned.

LANSING SUCCEEDED BRYAN
Robert Lansing, of New York, succeeded him. Lansing took up where Mr. Bryan left off and stuck grimly to the job through the trying days of war and through the long peace negotiations at Paris. He remained Secretary until after Mr. Wilson returned from his unsuccessful pilgrimage through the west in behalf of his "cherished League of Nations." The President was a "very sick man," unable to discharge the duties of the Chief Executive. Their already widening relationship stretched to the breaking point when Mr. Wilson practically accused his Secretary of State of trying to usurp Presidential powers during this period and Mr. Lansing got out. He is now practicing international law in Washington, and is engaged in writing his memoirs, which, it is reported, will prove sensational when published. Lansing was succeeded by Bainbridge Colby, another New Yorker, who retired today.

GARRISON DROPPED OUT
Garrison followed Bryan in the ranks of retirement. He dithered with the President as to the best method of preparing America for the war that was to come. He got out gracefully, with no noise and little sensation, either before or after. He is now running the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company as receiver Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, succeeded him and goes out today after five years of trying service.

Next to go was McReynolds. He wanted to retire to the quiet dignity of the United States Supreme Court bench and President Wilson gratified his desire, replacing him with Thomas Watt Gregory, of Texas, who later retired at his own request and engaged in a lucrative law practice in Washington. A Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, then came into the Attorney General's chair, where he has remained, although subjected to an almost continuous fire of criticism and objection.

McADOO'S LONG SERVICE
William G. McAdoo, of New York, was the Cabinet bulwark during the most trying days of the government's war activities. He was Mr. Wilson's first Secretary of the Treasury, and he cemented their always cordial relations by marrying Eleanor Wilson, the President's second daughter. Then came the war. When the government took over the railroads Mr. McAdoo became Director General along with his other duties. He retired over a year ago in order to "make a living," as he himself expressed it. Carter Glass, of Virginia, then in Congress, succeeded McAdoo as head of the Treasury Department. He stayed until the White House request he went into the United States Senate to aid the Administration in the then hot fight over the ratification of the treaty. Glass was succeeded by David F. Houston, who was Secretary of Agriculture, and had long desired a Treasury berth. Houston retired today.

LANE WON POPULARITY
Franklin K. Lane, of California, the first Secretary of the Interior, was jecting himself into politics in such a way as to embarrass the Harding administration, but he will continue to be available to newspapermen through his secretary and will attend the theater and take daily automobile rides.

Any public expectation that there will be an early and large literary output from the president's pen, after he retires from office, is likely to encounter disappointment. He may write an impersonal history of world events, but he has no definite plans.

immensely popular in Government and Congressional circles. Like McAdoo, he found the financial sacrifices of staying in the Cabinet too great and retired at his own request, a year or so ago. He was succeeded by John Barton Payne, of Illinois, who goes out today.

William C. Redfield was Mr. Wilson's original Secretary of Commerce. He, too, was the subject of a great deal of criticism during his tenure of office. He retired some months ago to engage in private business in New York, and was replaced by Joshua Alexander, of Missouri, then in Congress. Alexander joined the ranks of ex-Cabinet officers today.

The Agriculture Department has seen only one change. David F. Houston, now Secretary of the Treasury, was the first and when he went into the Treasury berth he was succeeded by Edwin T. Meredith, of Iowa, the present Secretary.

Such is the history of the Wilson Cabinet that goes out today. Only three—Daniels, of the Navy; Burleson, of the Post Office, and Wilson, of the Labor Department—have a record of eight years' continuous service in their jobs.

WILSON WILL LEAD QUIET HOME LIFE AFTER MARCH 4 BUT HE WILL NOT SECLUDE HIMSELF, SAYS TUMULTY

President Wilson, who becomes a private citizen, will seek rest and quiet for a time, but he will continue to take an active interest in public affairs, according to his secretary, J. P. Tumulty. Mr. Wilson will seek to avoid projecting himself into politics in such a way as to embarrass the Harding administration, but he will continue to be available to newspapermen through his secretary and will attend the theater and take daily automobile rides.

lish a world court for the disposition of such justifiable questions as nations are agreed to submit thereto. In expressing aspirations, in seeking practical plans, in translating humanity's new concept of righteousness and justice and its hatred of war into recommended action we are ready most heartily to unite, but every commitment must be made in the exercise of our national sovereignty.

Since freedom impelled, humanity inspired, and nationally exalted, a world super-government is contrary to everything we cherish and can have no sanction by our republic. This is not selfishness, it is sanctity. It is not aloofness it is security; it is not suspicion of others, it is patriotic adherence to the things which made us what we are.

Today, better than ever before, we know the aspirations of our place in the world and a new appraisal of our nation by the world. The unselfishness of these United States is a thing proven, our devotion to peace for ourselves and for the world is well established, our concern for preserved civilization has had its impassioned and heroic expression. There was no American failure to resist the attempted reversion of civilization. There will be no failure today or tomorrow.

The success of our popular government rests wholly upon the correct interpretation of the deliberate, intelligent, dependable popular will of America. In a deliberate questioning of a suggested change of national policy, where internationalism was to supersede nationalism, we turned to a referendum of the American people. There was ample discussion, and there is a public mandate in manifest understanding.

America is ready to encourage, eager to initiate, anxious to participate in any seemingly program likely to lessen the probability of war and promote that brotherhood of mankind which must be God's highest conception of human relationship. Because we cherish ideals of justice and peace, because we appraise international comity and helpful relationship no less highly than any people of the world, we aspire to a high place in the moral leadership of civilization and we hold a maintained America, the proven republic, the unshaken temple of representative democracy, to be not only an inspiration and example, but the highest agency of strengthening good will and promoting accord on both continents.

Mankind needs a world wide benediction of understanding. It is needed among individuals, among peoples, among governments, and it will inaugurate an era of good feeling to mark the birth of a new order. In such understanding men will strive confidently for the promotion of their better relationships and nations will promote the comities so essential to peace.

We must understand that ties of trade bind nations in closest intimacy, and none may receive except as he gives. We have not strengthened ours in accordance with our resources or our genius, notably on our own continent, where a galaxy of republics reflect the glory of new world democracy, but in the new order of finance and trade we mean to promote enlarged activities and seek expanded confidence.

Perhaps we can make no more helpful contribution by example than prove a republic's capacity to emerge from the wreckage of war. While the world's embittered travail did not leave us devastated lands nor desolated cities, left no gaping wounds, no breast with hate, it did involve us in the delirium of experience, in expanded currency and credits, in unbalanced industry, in unspeakable waste, and disturbed relationships. While it uncovered our portion of hateful selfishness at home, it also revealed the heart of America as sound and fearless and beating in confidence unflinching.

Amid it all we have riveted the gaze of all civilization to the unselfishness and the righteousness of representative democracy, where our freedom never has made offensive warfare, never has sought territorial aggrandizement thru force, never has turned to the arbitrament of arms until reason has been exhausted. When the governments of the earth shall establish a freedom like our own and shall have sanctioned the pursuit of peace as we have practiced it, I believe the last sorrow and the final sacrifice of international warfare will have been written.

Our supreme task is the resumption of our onward, normal way. Reconstruction readjustment, restoration—all these must follow. I would like to hasten them. If it will lighten the spirit and add to the resolution with which we take up the task, let me repeat for our nation, we shall give no people just cause to make war upon us. We hold no national prejudices, we entertain no spirit of revenge, we do not hate, we do not covet, we dream of no conquest, nor boast of armed prowess.

If, despite this attitude, war is again forced upon us, I earnestly hope a way may be found which will unify us individuals in collective strength and consecrate all America, materially and spiritually, body and soul, to national defense. I can vision the ideal republic where every man and woman is called under the flag, for assignment to duty, for whatever service, military or civic, the individual is best fitted where we may call to universal service every plant, agency or facility, all in the sublime sacrifice for country and not one penny of war profit shall inure to the benefit of private individual, corporation or combination, but all above the normal shall flow into the defense chest of the nation. There is something inherently wrong, something out of accord with the ideals of representative democracy, when one portion of our citizenship turns its activities to private gain amid defensive war while another is fighting, sacrificing or dying for national preservation.

Out of such universal service will come a new unity of spirit and purpose, a new confidence and consecration, which would make our defense impregnable, our triumph assured. Then we should have little or no disorganization of our economic, industrial and commercial systems, no staggering war debts, no swollen fortunes to flout the sacrifice of our soldiers, no excuse for sedition, no pitiable slackness, no outrage of treason. Envy and jealousy would have no soil for their menacing development, and revolution would be without the passion which engenders it.

A regret for the mistakes of yesterday must not, however, blind us to the tasks of today. War never left such an aftermath. There has been staggering loss of life, and measureless wastage of materials. Nations are still groping for return to stable ways. Discouraging indebtedness confronts us like all the war torn nations, and these obligations must be provided for. No civilization can survive repudiation.

We can reduce the abnormal expenditures and we will. We can strike at war taxation and we must. We must face the grim necessity with full knowledge that the task is to be solved and we must proceed with a full realization that no statute enacted by man can repeal the inexorable laws of nature. Our most dangerous tendency is to expect too much of government, and at the same time do for it too little.

We contemplate the immediate task of putting our public household in order. We need a rigid and yet sane economy combined with fiscal justice and it must be attended by individual prudence and thrift, which are so essential to this trying hour and reassuring for the future.

The business world reflects the disturbance of war's reaction. Herein flows the life blood of material existence. The economic mechanism is intricate and its parts interdependent, and has suffered the shocks and jars incident to abnormal demands, credit inflation and price upheavals. The normal balances have been impaired, the channels of distribution have been clogged, the relations of labor and management have been strained. We

Let Us Hope For The Best

TODAY a new occupant sits in the White House, symbolic of a transfer of authority from one to the other of the great American political parties. For a time the rancor of partisanship has ceased; the bitterness and jealousies of a national campaign are dulled. May every true American accept this as an appropriate time to lay aside at least a little of loyalty to party and to supplant it with that much more loyalty to our common country.

We believe the statement will go undisputed that our people are too closely wedded to party, too hidebound in their opposition to measures, no matter how meritorious, simply because they originated in the camp of the opposition. This indictment lies not against one, but both parties. In our hearts we know better. After the close of a presidential campaign men on both sides freely admit that much which was said derogatory to the opposition prior to election was grossly exaggerated and should be forgotten the day after.

The Democrats have been "in" for eight years. For most of that time not only the White House, but both branches of congress have been Democratic. Now the tables are turned. The Democrats are "out" and the Republicans are "in" with an overwhelming preponderance. That the Democrats made mistakes goes without saying. But in the long run our public business was conducted and the war fought by largely the same methods the Republicans would have employed had they been in power.

To Democrats we would now urge co-operation with the majority party on every measure that is calculated to promote the interests of our common country. That is not only good Americanism, BUT IN THE LONG RUN IT WILL PROVE TO BE GOOD PARTISANSHIP.

A party of mere negation will never get far. A party that merely opposes what the party in power does, simply for the sake of establishing a record of opposition is on the wrong tack. It is simply adopting the methods of the cheap, pettifogging lawyer who hopes, by having the record show a long list of objections, to influence the next court to the belief that there must have been at least a few vital errors because of the multitude of objections recorded.

The brainy lawyer never does that. He recognizes that there is often strength in simple, unconditional admission. So it is with parties. Every party has strong men in it. And when these men look to the general good and are above mere temporizing and expediency they should have the support of fair-minded men in both parties. The merit of a proposed bill and not who is backing it should be the determining factor in every legislative body and in the mind of every executive.

We have grave problems ahead of us. And the wise or unwise solution of these problems will affect not merely the Republican party, but all citizens alike. It is sincerely to be hoped that the Democratic minority in congress will take this view in the perplexing days to come. President Harding will need all the help he can get. And if the Democratic house and senate leaders will adopt the simple rule of supporting meritorious measures, regardless of what side they originate on, they will not only be contributing to the common good, but in the end they will find that their opposition to bad measures will be infinitely strengthened and that they will have been playing really the shrewdest kind of politics.

We can lull our fears by saying that this is the greatest country in the world and postpone action on vital issues by saying that we always have and, presumably always will muddle thru somehow, but surely such a course is not the part of wisdom in a time like this. We have enough failures chalked up on the door of congress now. The time for partisanship is past. It has cost us dearly the past two years and to the lasting shame of Republicans theirs has been the major share of the guilt.

But it will do the Democrats no good to adopt similar tactics. The tremendous majorities given Republican candidates last fall are in no wise to be interpreted as votes of confidence in that party. Rather were they expressions of a lack of confidence in the Democratic party. The change was merely to give Republicans a chance. They will have four, not to exceed eight, years in which to redeem themselves and in which, to use the American vernacular, "to make good." If the public's verdict at the end of the probationary period is FAILURE, then there is slight doubt but that millions of Americans will turn, not backward to the Democratic party, but forward and away from both in vexation and utter disgust.

The condition of the United States today is an ominous indictment of both parties. We have had an embarrassment of wealth. We have the greatest actual and potential wealth of any nation in the world, almost we might say, of all the leading nations combined. Yet with all this abundance and to spare, millions are out of work and uncared and unknown thousands have not enough to eat and to wear.

It is an infamous situation and the greatest single cause for all of it is the disgusting orgy of partisan politics we have indulged ourselves in for the more than two years since the end of the war. The state of public mind during this shameful period, quite as disgusting as the similar period which followed the Civil war, can perhaps be best expressed in the avowed slogan of a few senate leaders to "Break Wilson!"

In order to "break" him congress fiddled and quibbled in the most crucial period of modern history. To the end of time historians will not have done with condemning the partisanship which held America in its infamous clutches during 1918, 1919 and 1920. And without trying to arouse unfounded fears or invoke the spirit of sensationalism, we believe it is high time we were pulling up stakes and leaving the Fool's Paradise in which we have been living or there are troubles ahead even here in rich and contented America which will tax our best energies to meet.

It is for this reason that we call upon the basic spirit of Americanism to show itself at this juncture. A stitch in time is invaluable. Regardless of party, we bespeak the loyal support of real Americans for the Harding administration. It will need all the disinterested aid it can get from whatsoever source. The real perils for Mr. Harding perhaps lie within his own party. It may be that some of the acts in opposition to President Wilson which he fathered or at least condoned while in the senate will now, like Banquo's ghost, rise up to taunt him.

But let us hope for better things. Let us hope that the ignoble spirit of partisanship has ere this run its course and that in its place will rise the truer, nobler America which will no longer shun a finish grapple with problems which refuse longer to down, but which press for solution NOW.

There is widespread belief, unpleasant that it is to state it, that Mr. Harding himself is not equal to the task which the American people have assigned to him. Certain it is that feeling exists in regard to congress. But again let us hope for the best. Let us hope that there is the latent wisdom in both the executive and legislative departments to cope with the fateful issues ahead. Let us hope that a broader and saner view of the problem of taxation will be taken at the coming special session than has ever before been taken by an American congress, FOR IT IS HERE AND HERE ALONE THAT THE SUPREME TEST WILL COME.

"The power to tax is the power to destroy," and the American people have wellnigh gone the limit in their experimentation with false and foolhardy methods of taxation. A mere shifting from excess profits taxes to higher tariffs and sales or consumption taxes will not save us. The key to the whole problem of taxation lies in the incidence of taxation and it must be admitted that the controlling minds in neither the Democratic nor Republican parties have ever got down to fundamentals on this one outstanding, vital phase of government.

But again, let us hope. And as we hope for better things from the men who control the destinies of government for the next four years, let us all do the one thing which lies within the power of every man, remove from our hearts and from our mental horizons as far as we possibly can THE BANE OF PARTISANSHIP, for if we do not the dire predictions of Washington, of Jefferson and a host of other great leaders will surely be visited upon a people who have descended into and are content ever to wallow in the disgusting mire of party politics.

New York Day-By-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, March 3.—Twenty thousand women in New York live under the constant eagle-eyed espionage of private detectives, so a man wise in the knowledge of high life undercurrents told me. He declared that the majority of the private agencies are supported by the vagaries of marital intrigue.

The affairs usually begin with mild peevish drinking flirtations and swirl on and on to scandalous divorce suits. Impoverished sons of blue-blooded families are known to be employed as divorce trailers and are thus able to enter private functions that would be denied the ordinary operative.

An amusing story is told of an elderly retired business man who met an elegantly ermine creature at a charity bazaar. He fell in love and a hasty marriage followed. In a few months he saw that a young caller at his home was particularly welcome with his bride. Several times he returned home unexpectedly to find them drinking tea together.

He bowed to the inevitable and permitted them to drain Love's chalice together. As he expected the wife soon tired of her new toy and renewed her interest in him. Then one night, stung by his indifference, she sobbed out the story of her intrigue. He patted her shoulder kindly and went to a desk from which he took many pages of paper.

It proved to be a report of the detectives who had been following her and her every move was carefully noted. "Never mind," he said, "I will destroy this and forget it" and he placed the pages on the burning logs of a great open fire in their drawing room. The next day he eloped to Europe with a young manicurist. And she has gone into seclusion.

Most of the women who play the mad, mad game of intrigue are those of wealth. They have plenty of servants and no home ties. There is apparently someone ever waiting to pay them attention and they begin to imagine that they are neglected. "When they think they are neglected," said my friend "there is nothing to stop them."

The most popular tea room in New York is in a hotel of little distinction off Fifth Avenue. A stranger going into the room cannot distinguish faces at the tables until his eyes become accustomed to the light. There are exits and entrances on three streets. Page boys are barred from the room and no telephone inquiries are answered.

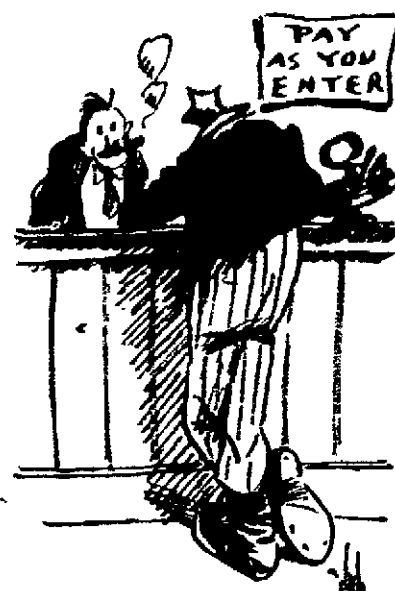

Young and middle aged men are still pouring into New York looking for work despite the fact that 17,000 jobless men now roam the streets and sleep in charity refuges. Panhandlers are in evidence at every subway

THE USUAL LUCK

In Kansas, where I lived for years, the winters were a fright: the north wind came and froze my ears when in my bed at night. The snow was always ankle deep, and filled my heart with pain, and murky heavens used to weep twelve kinds of chilling rain. And so I said, "I'll seek a clime where winter isn't known, where there is neither snow nor rain, and blizzards do not groan." And so I pitched my moving tent upon a sunny shore, where weather prophets don't lament, and groundhogs weep no more. And then the Kansas climate braced, and sprung a great reform: no blizzards o'er her prairies chased, the air was mild and warm. "The sweetest winter ever seen," my correspondents say; "the skies are blue, the grass is green, the jazzbirds sing all day." And on the seashore where I sit, the shore by long waves lashed, the old inhabitants admit that records have been smashed. "The coldest winter we have seen," these ancient men remark, "since we came o'er the billows green in Noah's costly ark." And should I back to Kansas go, where all the prospects please, the clouds would dump six feet of snow and I would promptly freeze. Alas, this is the sort of thing that always has been mine, and yet I'm happy as a king, so many things are fine.

POLICEMAN WATSON IN FINE SHAPE AGAIN

Has Gained 22 Pounds and is Well and Strong As Any Man In Town Since Taking Tanlac, He Says

"Yes sir, I have gained twenty-two pounds in weight by taking Tanlac, and I'm as well and strong as any man in town," said Western Watson, a well-known policeman living at 63 Harrison Ave., Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio. "I hadn't been myself in years—just felt bum and no-account all the time. My appetite was practically gone and my stomach bothered me so that whenever I ventured to eat a little something I always wished afterwards that I hadn't touched a bite. My blood seemed to be in bad condition, for my feet and legs stayed numb and cold all the time. At night I rolled and tossed so that sleep was next to impossible and I went down considerably in weight and didn't know what it was to ever feel good."

"Well, after I started taking Tanlac I never saw anybody pick up as fast as I did. I took six bottles and now I am in as good health as any man on the force. I weigh one hundred and seventy-one pounds, am as strong as an ox and feel as fine as I ever did. Tanlac is great. It's got the world beat."

Tanlac is sold in Coshocton by Siegrist and Williams and in Warsaw by J. D. Lawson.

RELENTLESS WARFARE RAGES OVER IRELAND

DUBLIN, March 2.—Another victim of the Sinn Fein's relentless warfare against spies, I was found near Curragh today. He was a farmer who had been taken from his home by a band of armed, masked men and shot to death.

Upon his breast was pinned the following note:—

"A convicted spy, Informers beware."

An unidentified man, aged about 70, was shot to death in the streets at Cork after curfew hours.

START TOMORROW AND KEEP IT UP EVERY MORNING

Get into the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Millions of folks breathe internally now instead of leading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles according to hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys, and intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood, causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real expert on the subject of internal sanitation.

ROSCOE TEAMS WIN TWO GAMES FROM COSHOCTON SQUADS

Dr. St. Clair Delivers An Interesting Lecture On the Care of the Teeth

Dr. C. W. St. Clair, of Coshocton gave a thirty minute address on the subject "How To Take Care Of The Teeth" to the members of the Roscoe M. E. Boys' club at the Roscoe town hall, as a preliminary to the double header basketball game at that place Thursday night. Dr. St. Clair told the boys how to take care of their teeth and how they should form the habit of keeping their teeth clean.

He explained to the boys how bad teeth in the mouth were injurious to the human body in many respects. He said that bad teeth caused many diseases and that they should be given attention as soon as they begin to decay.

The dentist explained to the boys the different parts of the tooth and how at different ages in a person's life, the tooth grows. He told the boys that they should take proper care of their teeth, as they play an important part in a person's life. Dr. St. Clair explained how a person comes to have the tooth ache and how to treat the teeth previously to avoid such pain. He closed his talk by saying that the boys would benefit their own bodies by properly taking care of the teeth at the conclusion of each meal. He said a boy would make a better athlete if he took excellent care of his teeth.

At the close of Dr. St. Clair's talk the boys engaged themselves in basketball sport. The Roscoe first and second junior teams took a double bill from the first and second junior teams of Grace M. E. church at the Roscoe gym hall.

The result of the first game was 10 to 9. This junior game was snappy from the first to the last bell. Clarence Fennell and Fulkerson for the Roscoe juniors were the real stars of the game. Fennell, ably assisted by Fulkerson secured the most baskets.

The first half of the game finished in favor of Roscoe, 3 to 1. The latter part of the game was nip and tuck. The game ended, 10 to 9.

The second and last game was played between the Roscoe second junior M. E.'s and the Coshocton second M. E.'s. This contest between the two church teams was a battle from the first blow of the whistle.

The Roscoe boys captured the bacon in the first frame of the contest and took the visiting team's measure by a 10 to 9 score.

The last half was played with much more pep and science than the first half. Sam Chaney, William Mencer and John Lyons all of Roscoe shared the honors of the game. Their team work was excellent and enabled the locals to get away with another victory. E. Slaughter, and G. Smith in the latter part of the game baffled "Neurasthenia is nerve exhaustion," says Dr. Frederick S. Kille, author of medical text books, and is caused by worry, overwork, emotional excitement and excesses of various kinds. To restore to complete health the men and women whose nervous energy is undermined, a pure organic phosphate known to The Wimmer-Arnold Drug Co. and all leading druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, must be taken freely with meals until the nerve and brain cells are revitalized with this natural element. It is nerve-wrecked people's one hope for a happy, useful future.

GERMANS LOOK WITH OPTIMISM UPON THE INDEMNITY PARLEY

Cabinet In Berlin Stands Behind Dr. Simons and Will Make New Offer

LONDON, March 4.—"The result of the German cabinet's deliberation on the indemnity situation is hopeful," it was announced by the German delegation today. "The members of the government at Berlin are backing up Dr. Walter Simons (the German foreign minister and head of the German delegation in London). The ministry is already considering new plans and it is most likely we will present a new indemnity offer to the allies on Monday."

Premier Lloyd George in delivering the allied ultimatum charged that the Germans were insufficiently taxed. Strong approval of Premier Lloyd George's speech arraigning Germany for her war crimes, and of the terms of the allies' four day indemnity ultimatum was voiced by the British press.

"We are prepared not to shrink from a more drastic treaty to enforce the schedule revised the original one," declared the Chronicle.

The Daily News points out the reparations demanded by the allies are not for imaginary wrongs but for real ones.

"The essential fact is that the door has been left open for further negotiations," said the Daily Herald organ of the labor party. "There is a general feeling that sanctions or penalties will not be required and that Germany will submit satisfactory proposals before Monday."

BERLIN, March 4.—The German cabinet met this morning to draw up fresh instructions for the indemnity delegation at London, based upon the answer which was returned yesterday to the Germans' counter proposals. It was authoritatively stated that Dr. Walter Simons, the foreign minister will not be supplanted as head of the German delegation.

The young men and women enjoyed a free-for-all entertainment, a dance and a banquet. Each one had a part in the entertainment festivities.

C. Homer Durant was the toast master of the evening. He jested and jollied the attendants with his witticisms.

The evening's entertainment was brought to a close following the supper.

BREAD MOBS FORM IN DETROIT, BUT POLICE ROUT THEM

DETROIT, Mich., March 4.—A mob of more than 300 men women and children protesting against the high price of bread was dispersed by police in front of the bakery of Samuel Rosen, 2421 Hastings street this afternoon.

Three men parading in front of the bakery of B. Rosen, 2023 Hastings street, armed with shotguns and refusing to let customers enter the place, took to their heels as soon as the police hove in sight. They had pounced upon customers as they emerged from the bakery, tore loaves of bread from their arms and threw them into the street.

They were threatening to wreck the place when Rosen telephoned the police. The trouble is the culmination of agitation for a reduction in the price of bread. Detroit is paying fifteen cents for loaves weighing one and a half pounds.

It has been proven again that we cannot while throwing our markets open to the world, maintain American standards of living and opportunity and hold our industrial eminence in such unequal competition. There is a lurking fallacy in the theory of banished barriers of trade, but preserved American standards require our higher production costs to be reflected in our tariffs on imports. Today, as never before, when peoples are seeking trade restoration and expansion, we must adjust our tariffs to the new order. We seek participation in the world's exchanges because therein lies our way to widened influence and the triumphs of peace. We know full well we cannot sell where we do not buy, and we cannot sell successfully where we do not carry. Opportunity is calling not alone for the restoration, but for a new era in production, transportation and trade. We shall reach our best by meeting the demand of a surpassing home market, by promoting self-reliance in production, and by bidding enterprise, genius and efficiency to carry our cargo in American bottoms to the marts of the world.

We would not have an America living within and for herself alone, but we would have her self-reliant, independent and ever nobler, stronger and richer. Believing in our higher standards reared thru constitutional liberty and maintaining opportunities, we invite the world to the same heights. But pride in things wrought is no reflection of a completed task. Common welfare is the goal of our national endeavor. Wealth is not inimical to warfare. It ought to be its friendliest agency. There never can be equality of rewards or possessions so long as the human plan contains varied talents and differing degrees of industry and thrift, but ours ought to be a country free from great blotches of distressed poverty. We ought to find a way to guard against the perils and penalties of unemployment. We want an America of homes, illumined with hope and happiness, where mothers, freed from the necessity for long hours of toil beyond their own doors, may preside as befits the hearthstone of American citizenship. We want the cradle of American childhood rocked under conditions so wholesome and so hopeful that no blight may touch it in its development, and we want to provide that no selfish interest, no material necessity, no lack of opportunity shall prevent the gaining of that education so essential to best citizenship. There is no short cut to the making of these ideals into glad realities. The world has witnessed, again and again, the futility and the mischief of ill considered remedies for social and economic disorders. But we are mindful today as never before of the friction of modern industrialism and we must learn its causes and reduce its evil consequences by sober and tested methods. Where genius has made for great possibilities, justice and happiness must be reflected in a greater common welfare.

Service is the supreme commitment of life. I would rejoice to proclaim the era of the Golden Rule and crown it with the autocracy of service. I pledge an administration wherein all the agencies of government are called to serve and ever promote an understanding of government purely as an expression of the popular will.

One cannot stand in this presence and be unmindful of the tremendous responsibility. The world upheaval has added heavily to our tasks. But with the realization comes the surge of high resolve, and there is reassurance in belief in the God-given destiny of our republic. If I felt that there is to be sole responsibility in the executive for the America of tomorrow, I should shrink from the burden. But I am a hundred millions, with common concern and shared responsibility answerable to God and country. The public summons them to their duty, and I invite cooperation.

I accept my part with single-mindedness of purpose and humility of spirit, and implore the favor and guidance of God in his Heaven. With these I am unafraid, and confidently face the future.

I have taken the solemn oath of office on that passage of Italy, written in the air, "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

This I plight to God and country.

Pepto-Mangan Makes Red Blood

Builds up men and women who lack energy

A healthy, full-grown person has in the neighborhood of fourteen pounds of blood in his or her body. The weight of the blood varies with different people, but it should not vary with the seasons.

For instance, if the normal weight of your blood is twelve pounds, and it falls to a pound in weight, it is one of the most precious pounds in the world and should be immediately regained.

To turn weak, watery blood into live, red, health-building blood take Gude's Pepto-Mangan.

Gude's Pepto-Mangan is an absolute dependable red-blood builder in all conditions of lowered vitality, not due to serious disease of the vital organs. It improves the appetite, imparts color to the cheeks, and creates new hope and ambition in those who have become pale, weak, and listless. Physicians recommend Gude's Pepto-Mangan. When you order, be sure the word "Gude's" is on the package. Without "Gude's" it is not Pepto-Mangan. Furnished in both liquid and tablet form. For sale by all druggists. —ADV.

CAMPAIGN IN MONTANA TO RID FARMLANDS OF LARGE WEED GROWTHS

HELENA, MONT., Mar. 3. — Weeds are doomed.

Members of the house committee on agriculture of the Montana legislature have introduced a "weed" bill which the urban members jocularly refer to as "the weeds."

It provides for appointment of a weed commissioner by county governments for work in rural districts, at the pay of a road supervisor; and by city councils at the pay of a street commissioner, to eradicate weeds.

The weeds particularly sought in the bill are the Canadian, Scotch bull and Russian thistle, fanweed and quack grass.

Under this measure the weed commissioner is empowered to remove weeds from farm lands in the country and vacant lots in the cities and charge the cost to the owner, who will find the bill on his tax rolls.

When the weeds infest a growing crop the farmer may escape the cost of eradication by notifying the county authorities of the jeopardy to his crop and his willingness to eradicate the weeds after harvest.

MONSTER EAGLE TAKES TEN YEAR OLD BOY HIGH INTO THE AIR

BILLINGS, MONT., Mar. 3. — Arnie Melotte, ten-year-old boy living on a ranch in the Upper Yellowstone Valley, is alive today after a narrow escape from an "eagle's" death.

Melotte, ambitious to earn bounty money for the pelts of coyotes, set two traps in a runway frequented by the varmints. Visiting his traps the lad found two monster bald eagles that impaled the mountainous sections near where the cabin of the lad's father, located.

While endeavoring to tie one of the eagles, Arnie having liberated it from the trap, the bird spread its great wings to flight and rose in the air with a lightning-like clanging to the top of the trap. The boy released his hold on the eagle, started away while the monster rumbled into a ravine. He was shaken up badly but suffered no serious injury.

WOMAN LONGS FOR SIMPLE VIRTUES

—TOO LATE

CHICAGO, March 3.—Mrs. Isabella Long, dressed in her cell today, longed for simple virtues.

Mrs. Long was booked on the charge of murder. She shot and killed Herbert Zeigler, the only man she loved in her luxurious apartment in the "gold coast" after a wild night of revelry.

"Oh, if I could only blot out the last thirteen years of my life and start anew," she sobbed.

"I was happy then, living in the humble little home of my parents in Columbus, Ohio, where I was born. I had to do it over. I wouldn't trade that simple little home for the most wonderful golden palace in the world."

"In the happy days of my youth, I was happy and content. I knew nothing of gay apartment parties, convivial grill room celebrations and the other things that go with the hectic night life. I had never tasted liquor then. I had never loved."

"If I had stayed back in Columbus, I would still be happy. I am sure. I would probably have married and had several children. I would have the respect of the community and be loved by my neighbors.

"Now I am charged with murder," Mrs. Orthwein said a foolish impulse to see a large city eventually led her to a cell.

She told of leaving Columbus for the first time when she was 16 years old. She went to Pittsburgh and met a ball player in a flirtation, whom she married.

"It was while jumping around from big city to big city that I acquired a taste for night life," she said. "I craved comfort and everything money can buy. How foolish I was."

She was divorced from the ball player and then married Ralph Orthwein, St. Louis, from whom she was later divorced.

"He had a lot of money and an ambition to spend it all on liquor," she said.

"It was too late to go back to the simple life after that."

"I wandered from city to city seeking excitement. In New York I arranged a marriage for convenience."

"Then I thought fate had given me happiness—I met Herbert Zeigler, the only man I ever loved—in Chicago. I broke off the engagement with the New York man—never mind his name. "But I loved Herbert too well, so well that I killed him when he became abusive. Herb, the only man I ever loved, is dead by my own hands."

Apply freely but gently to the affected surface, so as not to disturb the injured skin. Then place a light bandage over the burn to keep out the air. Resinol Ointment hastens the healing—an important point—as broken skin means an opportunity for germs to enter, and if they do they often cause painful and dangerous inflammation.

CONSCIENCE-TROUBLED JANITOR PAYS FOR THE STOLEN BED SHEETS

CHICAGO, Mar. 3. — For fourteen years M. E. Henderson Dodd, of Waitsburg, Wash., worried over the theft of $10 worth of sheets from the Warren avenue police station here, where he was employed as janitor in 1907.

The sheets were too large, but they were city property and Dodd had taken them.

Today a postal money order for $10 reached Chief of Police Mitzmorris. Dodd sent it to "Desk Sergeant Goodman" at the Warren avenue station. Goodman left the force twelve years ago and has been dead several years.

"I am sending this order for this sum, as my Lord says you must restore what you have taken to be forgiven," Dodd wrote.

"If he is square with the Lord he is square with the department," said Chief Fitzmorris. "We will consider the debt paid."

Senreco

The double-service tooth paste, keeps teeth clean AND GUMS HEALTHY.

Keeping the gums healthy and the mouth sweet is very important to health; more teeth are lost through the loosening of the tissue that holds the teeth in place than from decay.

Dental science to-day demands that a tooth paste must keep the gums healthy as well as clean the teeth.

Senreco was formulated to meet this requirement. Hundreds of dentists are prescribing and using Senreco because they have found that it does measure up to that standard.

SENRECO IS A WONDERFUL CLEANSER.

In addition to its remedial properties Senreco is a wonderful cleanser; acts directly on the mucin film, the basis of tartar; leaves the mouth cool and clean-feeling. As some one has expressed it—Senreco gives one a new idea on mouth cleanliness.

Get a tube to-day at your druggist or toilet counter—enjoy the healthy, cleanly feeling it gives your mouth and gums. Notice how brilliantly white Senreco makes your teeth. It performs this two-fold service for you and yet costs no more than the ordinary, old-fashioned tooth paste that simply cleans the teeth and leaves a pleasant taste.

clined to forego the ordeal. Attended only by his valet, Brooks, and a single secret service man, he went out of the capitol and into the private life almost unnoticed and unmarked. The attention of thousands outside already was on his successor as they moved restlessly to and fro in the cold March sunshine.

When Harding reached the inaugural stand there was a vast crowd which extended as far as the eye could reach stretched out before him.

Great bunches of roses banded the small inaugural stand. Immediate under the stand bearing standards stood a small group of marines and doughboys. Some of the old time splendor of an inaugural was provided by a band resplendent in brilliant scarlet uniforms, which played patriotic airs.

The great crowd waiting patiently for Harding to emerge from the capitol, stood around stamping its feet seeking to ward off the chill of the mippy March day.

NEW REMEDYTells How Redex Helped Him to Regain His Health
In a Very Short Time

If your stomach, liver or kidneys are out of order, or if you are run down and need a tonic, which you most surely do at this season of the year, try Redex. It has been highly endorsed by many Coshocton people.

The following statement of Mr. Chas. A. Johns, a molder in the employ of the Superior Drill Co. plant of Springfield, Ohio, speaks for itself.

He says "Redex" is a splendid medicine and has done me a world of good. Before I started taking it, I was in very poor shape; had no appetite at all; was so nervous that I seldom got a good night's rest and felt tired and drugged all the time. As a matter of fact I was so weak that I could hardly stand up to my work, which of course, is somewhat strenuous.

"Well I am strong and hearty now and feel fine; I had a good appetite and any kind of food agrees with me. I shall certainly continue taking Redex until I feel thoroughly fit as I am getting stronger all the time. Redex is a splendid medicine."

Redex is on sale in Coshocton at Page & Lorenz, Sechrist & Williams and at first class druggists.

Mrs. Harding listened to the speech with great emotion. She followed every word with an intensity seldom seen, and appeared very much moved.

The new president was first interrupted by applause at the end of his first paragraph.

Thereafter the interruptions were frequent, reaching the highest point when the president declared that "America could enter permanent military alliance nor enter any political commitments nor assume any economic obligations which will subject our decisions to any but our own authority."

There was a great outburst too, when the new president said "A world super government was contrary to everything we cherish."

The mechanical device used was effective and his voice carried well over the great throng.

Vice President Coolidge was sworn in at 12:20 p. m., the oath being administered by Vice President Marshall, who immediately after the oath began his speech. A wave of applause swept the floor and galleries as "Silent Cal" with right hand up lifted became the vice president of the United States. The applause was led by Massachusetts members of the house and senate.

When Marshall had finished he turned and bowed to his successor and the new vice president faced the crowded throng and delivered his short, terse speech in a clear voice. When it had ended Vice President Marshall bowed his head and officially closed the sixtieth congress.

The new senate was sworn in and convened following the delivery of Vice President Coolidge's and Mr. Marshall's address.

WOMEN LACK THE ARTISTIC SENSE,
UNDERWOOD SAYS

NEW YORK, March 4.—It's all right for women to paint—take it from a man who paints 'em.

The use of rouge and other cosmetics, just now is threatened by a growing storm of opposition from reformers, both wholesale and retail, from educators, civic organizations, and even governmental bodies.

(Clarence F. Underwood, famous artist who ought to know all about such things, gave his views today on painting women—or women painting.)

"Sure, they should paint if they need it—and many of them do," Underwood said.

"The trouble with the great majority of women is that when it comes to beautifying themselves they lack the artistic sense. They try to improve on nature, while what they should really do is to emulate nature more."

"SHOVELS" ARE USED

"Rouge, the lipstick and other toilet table accessories were intended, I believe, to be so employed that their use cannot be determined. But so many of our unthinking women now-a-days, especially young girls, throw on the make-up like the shovel, with the result that they look anything but human."

Underwood was asked what he thought about shaping eyebrows, beading eyelashes and other of the newest beauty stunts.

"Well," he replied, "I believe that carrying the thing a little too far. If the dear things want to do it, however, let them."

COLUMBUS, March 4.—Gov. and Mrs. Davis, adjutant General Forester, the governor's military staff, members of senate and house, W. E. Hall, ex-senator clerk and other prominent Ohio republicans are enroute today to Washington to attend the inauguration of president-elect Harding.

FINDLAY, March 4.—Common Pleas Judge William F. Duncan, has been asked by Attorney George M. Phelps, to rule on the legality of the new cost-plus street car franchise, passed February 14 by city council, calling for a cent fare at the start. Phelps, in a suit attacking the franchise's validity, declared that council has no authority to grant a car commission, created by the grant, power to regulate the company's finances. Five-cent fare now prevails.

DAYTON, March 4.—The city commission, in order that fines assessed in prosecutions of soft drink, parlor proprietors be placed in the city treasury, instead of being turned over to the state, is preparing a proposed municipal ordinance, along lines of the state statute.

BARTON, March 4.—Lieut. Jesse M. Barton, wounded in the Argonne, has just undergone his 11th surgical operation since being wounded.

A Hun shell took off his leg and wounded his spine. For nearly six months, it was feared the spinal wound would prove fatal, but experts at the Walter Reed hospital cured that wound and he is still in the hospital, having frequently undergone amputations.

The latest, last week, was in an effort to relieve suffering from cramps occasioned by earlier amputations. Surgeons have not given up hope of curing him permanently.

BRIDGEPORT, March 4.—This town, which has a water contract with the Martins Ferry waterworks which, also, supplies Brookside, may refuse to renew its contract. Martins Ferry has installed a meter and wants Bridgeport to pay for every gallon of water used here instead of on a monthly contract basis.

COLUMBUS, March 4.—When he told the court that Blanch, his wife, threatened to jab a poker in his eye and otherwise injure him and that, going to his place of business, she threatened to tear off his clothes, Frank J. Mitchell was successful in getting Common Pleas Judge Scarlett to join Mrs. Mitchell from interfering with her husband who has filed suit for divorce.

WOOSTER, March 4.—Gross receipts of public sales in Wayne county from $2,000 to $5,000 this year. Auctioneers, now in the busiest part of their season, report a most noticeable falling off in the prices at which articles are sold.

CADIZ, March 4.—Frank Welsh Forsythe, former local resident, this week took up his work as secretary of the state civil service commission. He graduated in 1916 from Ohio Wesleyan university, leaving on commencement day to enlist in the "Get Villa" expedition. Attending the officers' training school, he won a lieutenantcy in the 33rd division, becoming a captain while overseas. Returning from France, he has been residing in Columbus.

He is a son of Rev. Frank Forsythe. His grandfather, the late Jesse Forsythe, represented Harrison county in the state legislature from 1875 to 1880.

BELLAIRE, March 4.—A quartette of local youngsters went bathing in the Ohio river here Sunday. The day was fine, but they said it was "it-too-hot" and, with teeth chattering, they made a dash for the bank after the one, two, three, all-together plunge.

BARNESVILLE, March 4.—The H. I. Roby Cigar Company, whose plant was destroyed by fire last Saturday, with a loss estimated as high as $400, will resume operations in another factory building here within two weeks. About 4,000,000 cigars were burned. The odor of the tobacco hung over the town two days.

BUCKEYE, March 4.—With a view to raising funds to aid in paying off the city's deficits, a special committee of city councilmen, headed by City Solicitor Clarence U. Ahl, is investigating the feasibility of licensing all curbstone automobile service stations, taxicabs, poolrooms, theatres and moving picture houses, basement stairways that cut into the public sidewalk, advertising racks which occupy sidewalk space, fruit and grocery displays on the sidewalks, shining stands, and in fact, any private money making enterprise which occupies public streets or sidewalks.

WOODSFIELD, March 4.—In opening a jar of fruit, Mrs. Thomas Dougherty cut her wrist when the glass broke. An artery was severed. A physician prevented her from bleeding to death.

generations yet to come.

THE DAY'S BEST SPEECH

Vice-President Mar-hall's address to the senate concluded as follows:

"A government dedicated to the inalienable rights of man to life, to liberty and to the pursuit of happiness can find its perfect accomplishment only in representatives brave and strong enough to rise above the ambitions, passions, and prejudices of the individuals and groups. Representative government was intended to guarantee these inalienable rights of men thru the enactment and enforcement of laws calculated to preserve and promote equal and exact justice to all men. Religions die because priests numbe their creeds, but have no faith in their Gods. Governments go to wreck because their statesmen shout aloud their shibboleths but let a friendly enemy pass the word.

"I freely grant the right of this people to change our form of government and to adopt other basic principles, but, if it is to be done, let it be done decently and directly so that all of us may know it. The old faith has already too many sleek and smiling Joabs asking of it, 'Is it well with thee, my brother?' While the old order endures let representatives represent the old ideals; let it be understood that they are not mere bell boys, subject to calls for legislative cracked ice every time the victims of a debauch of greed, gambling, or improvidence feel the favor of frenzied need.

"The life is more than meat and the body than raiment. It is of minor importance who holds the wealth of nation if the hearts of all its people beat with true historic American throbs. The clothes may mark but the clothes cannot make the gentleman. The economic rehabilitation of the ancient faith which upheld the ragged continentals emerged in pristine glory from the throes of civil war, and hurled its smiling and undaunted face against the grim engines of tyranny upon the fields of France, is a far greater work.

"It is enough—perhaps too much. Who am I to suggest, even with shame faced timidity anything to you. For eight long years, crowded with events which have forever changed the currents of the world's history. I have been with you. I come to the end of them with a feeling of heartfelt gratitude to you all for those little nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and charity which have marked your friendship and good will. You have been good to me. The odor of your friendship will sweeten any air that I may breathe. Not one of you can wish for himself a kinder fate than I would give you if I were omnipotent.

"I go but you remain. I leave with the same inarticulate cry in my soul with which I came to you: my country. It is no new nor unusual cry for the American, but it has, I fear, myriad concepts.

To some it means broad acres and fertile fields, to many opportunity for personal betterment; to a thousand others, the right to enter every vocation, the right to find lodgment in a mind diseased; to the half educated, that democracy should be governed as soon by the infant cry as by the prophetic warning; but to me it is but the composite voice of all the good and wise and self-sacrificing souls who trod or tread its soil, calling for that liberty which is law ennobled, preaching that doctrine which seeks not its own, but the common good and, above all, warning us by the memory of the past and the hope of the unborn to close our ears to the moanings of every peripatetic reformer who

Says Americans

Are 'Lip Lazy'

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 3.—Average Americans are "lip lazy and ignorant or indifferent of the fundamentals of our language," Miss Susan B. Davis, of the Kent Ohio, state normal college declared today in an address before the national society for the study and correction of speech disorder. The meeting was held in connection with the national education association.

Miss Davis urged better speech as a means for making better Americans. Special problems arising in teaching crippled children were discussed before the association of teachers of crippled children by Jane A. Neil, principal of the Spalding school of Chicago.

The three leading Italian discoverers are John Cabot, Christopher Columbus and Gasparo Aselli.

Rail Revenues Slump
Despite Retrenchment

CLEVELAND, March 4.—Addressing the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce today on "Some Problems of Railroad Management," Elisha Lee, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad said the revenues of the Pennsylvania system during the month of January were more than $250,000 a day less than expenses, despite acute cuts.

The road has laid off 61,000 employees since September, he said, and during the present month we must carry retrenchment still further, as we see no prospect of an increase in the volume of traffic.

"The railroads must gain control of their expenses without delay," he declared, "for the situation may get completely out of hand."

Wages of common labor on railroads, he asserted, should be reduced to those prevailing in other lines of work. Concerning general wage reductions, he questioned "whether the time is fully ripe to formulate a decisive answer," suggesting, however, that in a period of declining prices, "the money wage" could be reduced without cutting "real wages" below the level fixed by the wage increase award of the railroad labor board last summer.

Year's Tax Duplicate
Over $10,000,000,000

COLUMBUS, March 3.—Ohio's grand tax duplicate last year climbed above the $10,000,000,000 mark, it was announced yesterday by the state tax commission.

The total was $10,633,102,422, compared with $9,602,153,664, a gain of $1,030,948,768.

The new duplicate will produce taxes aggregating $205,356,503, a gain of $58,011,593.

Personal property listed amounted to $4,330,222,885 and real estate to $6,302,879,537.
